CATALOG DESCRIPTION:
The purpose of this course is to introduce students to the theory, assessment techniques, and intervention strategies used in the practice of family systems counseling. The focus of the course will be on building a theoretical base for understanding and applying family systems counseling strategies and techniques. Didactic and experiential learning will provide students with the opportunity to apply and integrate knowledge and skills gained through readings, lectures, group work, and films.

RATIONALE:
Current professional literature suggests that understanding the individual in the context of the family system can greatly enhance therapeutic outcomes. It is believed that counselors working in community and school settings will be better able to serve the needs of individual clients/students when they are able to understand the impact of the family on individual growth and development. It is also believed that family systems training will provide students with the necessary tools to work effectively with families in school, agency, and other related human service settings.

STATEMENT OF THE MAJOR FOCUS AND OBJECTIVES OF THE COURSE:
* To build a knowledge base for understanding the theory and practice of family systems counseling
* To develop an understanding of the unique role of the family in the development of the individual
• To become familiar with the role of the therapist in family systems counseling
• To increase one's knowledge of his or her own family of origin
• To become aware of the developmental process involved in "the normal" family life cycle
• To become knowledgeable in the area of ethical practice in family systems counseling
